Anvil Acquires Seminole Tubular Products

November 18, 2009

We are pleased to announce effective November 18, 2009 Anvil International purchased certain assets of the Seminole Tubular Products Company, including the Seminole brand name, from John Maneely Company. Seminole is a manufacturer of steel pipe nipples which are primarily used for mechanical and fire protection systems, as well as retail distribution and the oil and gas business.

This acquisition, combined with the Anvil and Beck line of steel pipe nipples and couplings, gives us three very strong brand names and represent an expansion to Anvil's capabilities. This further signifies our commitment to providing the most extensive piping connection package of products in the industry. Anvil looks forward to providing the Seminole customers with continued quality product and service.
